Travis Abercrombie is a modern rock singer/songwriter originally hailing from South Carolina. Travis himself has been performing at various clubs, colleges, and festivals for eight years. He started off his music career at Clemson University, where he co-founded one of South Carolina's most successful college party bands at the time, Seven Miles. The group ended up selling over 3000 CD's in its career, which left Travis wanting to take his career to the next level. So, after recording a debut solo album, he decided to pick up and move to Nashville to "stick out" as a rock-pop artist in a predominately country town.

Travis' breakout CD, entitled Spin, hit the stores, and the band hit the stage. The buzz started to come, and they found that they had the talent, drive, and eventually, a business team, to be propelled to the next level. Two local entertainment publications, The Nashville Scene and The Rage, both had the Travis Abercrombie Band as their "Critics' Pick" for every single local Nashville show. Better yet, the southeast regional entertainment publication, The Weekly's, Inc., wrote a full-page article saying that The Travis Abercrombie Band was the next "Band on the Brink". The album, Spin, in a word is... "WOW" (amazon.com 2002). "From top to bottom, they are all great songs with different moods." Everyone seems to have a favorite, which is cool by Travis. He "sings about lust, obsession, and longing with genuine emotion". (Donna Colelli, Sensored Magazine.) The band toured throughout late 2002, and all of 2003 to promote Spin ...selling over 2500 copies at shows!!!

Since the album's release, Nashville radio stations like 102.9 "The Buzz" and Lightning 100.1 have had Travis in as their studio guest, and have played the singles "A Little Too Much" and the title track, "Spin" in steady rotation on their weekly local music shows. Consequently, 102.9 "The Buzz" had also chosen the single, "A Little Too Much", to be on the "Best of Local Buzz" compilation CD to be released in the summer 2003. Travis music is often heard on AIIR Radio (Artists International Independent Radio), which is a Live Internet Radio Station promoting independent and unsigned artists across the country.

In late 2003, the CD was also placed into rotation with college radio stations throughout the country. But, THE highlight of Travis' career came in April 2003, when the band had the honor of opening for one of Travis' biggest influences, Vertical Horizon, at the University of Texas' "40 Acres Fest" in front of thousands of people! The band continued to tour through the summer, fall and winter of 2003, but in November '03, due to some "timing" issues with the industry itself, the team decided to re-energize and pursue other interests in '04...like songwriting for other artists (check out www.marjorylee.com), starting an artist development company and booking agency with the now successful Nashville firm, Dreamscapers Int'l, and just getting ready for a new project that he can come out guns blazing' with.

"Only a matter of time before these songs hit radio. The best indie mainstream pop/rock album out there." - CDBABY
